World Family Doctor Day is May 19

AAFP

The AAFP is honoring World Family Doctor Day with a special edition of Family Medicine On Air with Dr. John Parks, a family physician working in Malawi. Dr. Parks will speak and take your questions in a 15-minute Google Hangouts On Air video.

What: Family Medicine On Air special episode for World Family Doctor Day
When: Thursday, May 19, at 10 a.m.
Where: Google Hangouts On Air
Who: Dr. John Parks and your own FMIG Network leaders

Dr. Parks Bio

Dr. Parks finished his family medicine residency in 2013 at the University of North Carolina after attending medical school at Georgetown. He set out to start his career as a family physician to find out where family medicine existed and where it did not, and to help it develop in the places it did not. He found that place in Malawi, where he now works as a faculty lecturer in a very new department of family medicine at the University of Malawi College of Medicine. He began his work there in August 2014 working with an NGO on pediatric HIV/AIDS work, developed relationships with stakeholders in the nascent family medicine movement in Malawi, and now has the opportunity to work in both undergraduate and postgraduate medical education in Malawi. Dr. Parks will talk about what medical students need to know about global health and will take your questions!