

Help Bring AEG Benefits to Students!

While AEG boasts over 1,000 student members, only 29 student chapters currently exist to support our future professionals. To address this issue, the AEG Student & Young Professional Support Committee (SYPSC) has begun a University Outreach program to promote AEG and establish new student chapters. Increasing the number of student chapters will help students benefit from increased exposure to professional development and networking opportunities, access to scholarships, and notifications of AEG news, events and programs.

You can help! The SYPSC has created an online “easy reply” form in which you can provide us with contact information for your alma mater in under a minute! We need only a contact name and university/department, and we will do the rest. By providing this information, you are not only helping the students that will benefit from participating in an AEG student chapter, but strengthening AEG and advocating for the professions of environmental and engineering geology!

Keep an eye out for the December issue of AEGNEWS, which will include an article outlining this initiative – as well as other SYPSC projects – in more detail. Feel free to contact SYPSC co-chairs, Nathan Saraceno (nrsaraceno@gmail.com) or Adair Gallisdorfer (agallisdorfer@yahoo.com), with any questions about the University Outreach program.
