

Quality Improvement Study on Immunization Practices

By AAFP

The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has asked AAFP to help distribute a survey on the general knowledge, attitudes, and practices of family physicians regarding immunizations among providers of non-pregnant women (www.surveymonkey.com). Researchers at Emory University School of Medicine are conducting this quality improvement study to assess health care providers' knowledge of immunization licensing recommendations.

The survey should take less than five minutes and personal identifiers will not be collected. Those interested in taking the survey will have until November 15, 2013 to complete it.
