

The Courage to Care in the Face of Infectious Disease
Saturday, April 11, 2015
7:30 am – 3:30 pm

In this era of emerging and re-emerging infectious diseases, it is critically important for nurses in all areas of the profession to have relevant, up-to-date information related to important practice implications. The purpose of this program is to provide nurse attendees with current knowledge related to the assessment and management of patients with infectious diseases and ethical implications for patients, the inter-professional healthcare team, and communities at the local, national, and global levels.
