

National Nanotechnology Initiative Seeks Stakeholder Input

The National Nanotechnology Initiative (NNI) has announced the NNI Strategic Planning Stakeholder Workshop for this July 13-14 in Washington, D.C. The workshop will gather stakeholder input regarding the goals and objectives of an updated NNI Strategic Plan, which is now under development and scheduled for completion by December 2010.

To continue to advance nanotechnology opportunities in food, barrier and active packaging applications, it is critical that the NNI Strategic Plan contain input from those active in these areas. The Strategic Plan will help advance nanotechnology research and development, responsible development, technology transfer from research to commercial applications, and education and workforce development.

Please consider attending the NNI Stakeholder meeting July 13-14 at the Hotel Palomar Arlington. To see the agenda and register, visit <http://www.nano.gov/html/meetings/NNISPWorkshop/index.html> . Registration is limited and based on a first-come, first served basis, so register today.